have those healing moments that change their whole perspective. It will change their whole relationship with Christ."

But, "after the miracle, 'now what?' We also want to help address the 'now what,'" says Tammy. "We're helping people work toward continued healing and growth after the initial encounter with Jesus."

Whether you're single, married, engaged, or divorced, if you would like to talk to someone this week regarding your family relationships, you can discreetly request a private, 40-minute session by scanning the QR code.

In Matthew 11:28 Jesus invited "all who are weary and burdened" to come to Him, and He promised to give them rest. He still keeps that promise to His followers. Here at camp meeting, the family and marriage coaching and prayer ministries provide opportunities to encounter Christ and experience His healing power. 🙏

Sacred Quotables

"Before we came into the church, we had people praying for us specifically and we didn't know it. And I think that made me realize that God is real, because they prayed us into the church. And so I just know God works through prayer. The other time was our very first camp meeting. There was an accident out on the corner of M-46. There used to be a store in that building where people would stop on their way out from camp meeting. And there was a really bad accident. It happened while everybody was in there. And all of a sudden, this whole store just stopped. And everybody started praying. I had never experienced something like that. Just knowing people pray for you, even when bad things are happening and good things."

Memo

A Time to Heal

Brianna Martin, Communication

"Come with hurts and leave with healing." That's how Pastor Rob Benardo summed up the purpose and mission of the prayer ministry here at Michigan Conference Camp Meeting.

Led by Pastor Benardo, this small group of volunteers is available 12 hours a day (7 a.m.-7 p.m.) to pray and talk with anyone who stops in. Volunteers also pray over the requests submitted each day. "I have the greatest job on campus, really," Pastor Bernardo exclaimed.

If there's something on your heart, please stop by the Prayer Chapel (in the basement of the Girls Dorm) or drop your prayer requests in one of the collection boxes around campus. Boxes are located in the Prayer Chapel, at the prayer ministry booth in the exhibit tent, and at the information desk outside of the main auditorium.

KNOWING THE TIME

Offering another avenue for Christ-centered healing, the mission of Pastor Steve and Tammy Conway's marriage and family coaching ministry is to provide "a safe place for transparency, honesty, and perspective" for people with questions and issues regarding their relationships.

The Conways love serving people through marriage and family coaching. "What makes us excited and passionate is when people experience healing," explained Pastor Conway, referencing the story of the woman healed from an 18 year infirmity in Luke 13. "We love it when people

Service with a Smile

Judy Klein, Communication

For the Mobile Kitchen team, preparation for camp meeting began months ago. Run entirely by Adventist Community Services-Disaster Response (ACSDR) volunteers, planning for the Mobile Kitchen has been in the works since January. Chelli Ringstaff, ACSDR director, and her team of two volunteers begin the daunting task of creating the Mobile Kitchen (MK).

A good team is essential to the success of the Mobile Kitchen. In January, Rhonda Daughtery and Staci Gusky meet together, plan the menu, and find volunteers. Sometime after, they purchase all the food, and arrive to assist Ringstaff with the kitchen set-up.

During camp meeting, the volunteers spend hours prepping and cleaning for meals. The MK is open for lunch, but to serve food during that time, there's a lot of prep work to be done. The veggies need to be chopped, the noodles cooked, trash removed, as well as stocking the utensils and condiments—and this certainly isn't an exhaustive list!

Ringstaff knows the value of her team. "I love my volunteers," Ringstaff says, "I am so thankful for their dedication." She explains that her team donates hours of their time out of love for service. "That's the beauty of the Mobile Kitchen," she says, "it's not a paid position, people are serving their time to make this work for camp meeting, for their love for Michigan ACSDR."

She further explains that camp meeting provides the opportunity for both training and to raise funds in the event of an unexpected disaster. "We know the system," Ringstaff says, "we have trained volunteers, and we are able to go to the disaster because we have raised money for ACSDR at camp meeting." All profits from the Mobile Kitchen are donated to ACSDR.

Across the street from the camp meeting campus is yet another favorite place: the recently renamed Snack Shack. All proceeds from the Snack Shack benefit the GLAA worthy student fund. The Snack Shack has a refreshed menu: there's cake pops and cupcakes, in addition to ice cream and snack foods, like corn dogs, fries, and nachos.

The best part? The Snack Shack is also run by a team of volunteers: the Brower, Burby and Pittman family, that Delwin Garcia, the GLAA principal, views as "a dedicated group of students and their parents." Garcia explains that they volunteer in "an effort to bring attention and funds to Great Lakes Adventist Academy."

The Snack Shack is usually busy, and the volunteers work hard to ensure that service is quick and satisfactory. Garcia explains that on Saturday night, the team "completed 90 orders in 90 minutes."
